

MINIMALIST LANDSCAPE

A dark, silhouetted mountain range is visible against a dark sky, occupying the top portion of the page. The mountains are rendered in shades of black and dark brown, with some peaks and ridges clearly defined.

Hi All,

So you might be wondering what the hell is going on? Why are the images so dark? Well welcome to my 12th zine! In my latest issue I'm showing you my love of landscape photography, specifically mountain ranges. In my opinion nothing comes close to the way mountains make you feel; the heights, the air, and the views.

Enjoy!
Ivan Riascos
whitelightbulb.com

